

IQUA's Constitution

An early version of the Constitution was accepted [by the members?] on 24th February 1978. A version with 20 Articles was circulated in March 1984 (reproduced below). An amendment relating to honorary membership, dated March 1995, is appended. At the AGM on April 7th, 2001, the name of the Association was formally changed to "The Irish Quaternary Association", to better fit the pre-existing abbreviation "IQUA". In 2012 point 5 relating to when the AGM is to be held was defined more loosely and a new occasional award, the Frank Mitchell award introduced, both points are appended. In 2018 and due to the INQUA congress the following year, point 4 relating to the length of the terms of IQUA committee members was appended to allow for extension of the term by two years in exceptional circumstances.
